UNITY PROJECT

Congratulate the ministers locally who have kept the concept of a religious service the theme of Peace at Appomattox C. H. on the anniversary of the reunion of our great sacred spot in 1865. Many of our most commendable, and it should meet the support of our people so that it may continue.

CHINA

China Reporting Service, which specializes in news from the mainland has offices in Hongkong. Daily reported some interesting information in regard to China and the mainland.

Reports indicated that the Chinese are presently having a countrywide grass root fight against Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Communique stated that the Communists on the mainland were pushing four points across to the peasants in China in an attempt to turn them against the Russian leader. There is some question as to the accuracy of these reports, but they are certainly worth considering and are probably accurate.

The release states that the first point being pursued the hardest by the Red Chinese is the accusation that Khrushchev is an "opportunist," who dares to attack Stalin posthumously, but who kept quiet during Stalin's lifetime.

Another point raised by the speakers who are going directly to the peasants, is that Khrushchev is "revisionist," or one who opposes Communist China's firm stand on the inevitability of war.

There is a possibility that Communist may be divided into two camps, rather than one united front.

BOXING

The sport of boxing has steadily changed over the years. Once men fought with bare knuckles, then gloves were introduced, then heavier gloves, and so on. But even with today's heavier gloves, people are still getting killed.

In the past twenty years the number of people who think boxing should be banned as a spectator sport has increased. There is today a powerful sentiment in favor of abolishing boxing. It is compared to the Roman arena, where thousands gathered to see a little blood and possible death.

Seeing men fight is an exciting spectacle and always has been and always will be, but the time will probably come when promoters will not be allowed to make money out of turning loose two men in a ring to go after each other's heads in a knockout effort, for the benefit and glee of a crowd.

Boxing may survive if compulsory headgear is inaugurated and if heavier gloves are made mandatory.

Football has made remarkable advances, in protecting the bodies of the players. And the game has not lost in crowd appeal. Cushioned headgear might decrease the number of knockouts in boxing, but it would save lives and permanent injuries to participants, and the sport could survive as a game of skill.

Truth About Alliance

President John Kennedy has asked Congress for approximately $5,000,000,000 for foreign aid, and has placed exceptional stress on aid to Latin America. The aid to Latin America is known as the Alliance For Progress program. The President wants to spend $3,000,000,000 on the Alliance For Progress.

There are several factors which must be considered by today's Congress, in accepting or refusing the President's request for Latin American aid.

The first is the debt ceiling. For the past year now, the Kennedy Administration has been hiking its estimate of the current-year deficit. Last March it predicted Mr. Kennedy's last budget for fiscal 1962 would turn up 2.1 billion in the red. (This is the budget year ending June 30th.) In May, the estimated deficit was changed to 3.6 billion. In June, it was changed to 3.7 billion. In July, the estimate was 5.3 billion. In October, the estimate was a 6.9 billion deficit. In January, this was increased to 7 billion.

Secondly, aid to Latin America is, in some cases pouring money down a bottomless pit. It may not accomplish its intended purpose.

Too many countries in the Latin America area are controlled by too few people.

U. S. tax dollars cannot purchase prosperity for them.

However, there is the sheer fact that the U. S. must maintain its strong place of leadership in North and South America. Many do not realize that, for example, in the one nation has one vote, and in recent years many, many nations have been set up out of former colonial empires. A solid bloc of nations in North, Central and South America forms one of our greatest assets. As we see it, we are in a bad way financially, but we must cling to our hemisphere strength.

It is a difficult decision for Congress to make.
